Welcome Message

The Society for Environmental Geochemistry and Health and the Department of Geology and Geoenvironment of the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens invite you in Europe and the 38th International Conference on Environmental Geochemistry and Health.

This key SEGH annual event will provide the opportunity for experienced and more junior researchers and students to promote their own work and interact in person with peers and knowledgeable colleagues.

The SEGH 2023 themes will focus on:

- Emerging contaminants and human health in land, water and air
- Innovative data collection methods for studying environmental change
- Environmental geochemistry in the energy transition era
- Global databases for geochemistry and beyond

Athens, a metropolis of South East Europe provides excellent opportunities to explore history, culture and a beautiful Mediterranean environment. Our social program will make the most out of the Athens surroundings, highlighting the geosites of the Acropolis of the ancient city as well as the Athens riviera.
